

Your Commitment to Mastermind Group

Masterminding is all about being there for each other.

It's about showing up and participating deeply for every single meeting. Because of the nature of a mastermind group, a commitment is required. Your mastermind group members rely upon your participation, and you want to know that they are going to be around for you, too.

Often, new mastermind group memberships require a commitment for a specific period of time, sometimes three months or more. Why? Because the best groups – the most effective and bonded and helpful groups, the groups that help each individual to move rapidly toward their dreams – are ones that stick together for at least three months.

In short, the more often you participate and the longer you participate, the more you will get out of the group.

Mastermind groups look for highly-motivated people who are both willing to ask for opinions/decisions and support, and are willing to give the same to other people. Groups are looking for people who are ready to commit several hours per month to their own personal and business growth.

And it's not just about showing up for meetings. True commitment means you will offer your expertise and support – and ask for the same – in a balanced way at every meeting. Sometimes group members are great at giving advice and tips but when it comes to their own turn to be in the Hot Seat, they mumble, "I have nothing to brainstorm around for this meeting. You can skip me." That's not good!

It's the give-and-take among members that makes a group valuable to everyone.
